YOUR DAILY PRAYER GUIDE FOR THE UNREACHED

UNREACHED PRAYER FOCUS:

THE HMONG DAW

The Hmong Daw are an unreached people group living in rural, southern China and in other parts of Southeast Asia. Their population is estimated at roughly 300,000. Many Hmong Daw are skilled in embroidery, as well as cultivating small plots of crops like corn, fruits, and other vegetables, which they sell in local markets.

Shamanism and animism are the predominant religions of most Hmong Daw people.

In the 1980s, Christian broadcasts from FEBC reached many Hmong villagers elsewhere in Southeast Asia, with an estimated¹ 400,000 people converting to Christianity. The Hmong Daw in China, however, were left largely unreached, with only 1.8%² currently estimated to be Christians. The Hmong Daw have been persecuted for centuries and have learned to be distrustful of foreign ideas—including Christianity. Local leaders feel that Christianity weakens their control and clashes with their culture, which leads to vigorous opposition toward those who come to Christ.
